A new era begins at Horst's Little Bakery

By TRENTON SCROGGINS
Special to the Courier

Horst's Little Bakery Haus announced its baker and founder, Horst Moehlmann, plans to retire Saturday to care for his wife, Mary Moehlmann. The retirement marks 14 weeks after Mary was hit by a vehicle while crossing the street near Main and Cragmont in downtown Madison.

The bakery posted the announcement Thursday morning to Facebook, noting that Horst Moehlmann's grandson Thomas "Tommy" Gregory, who is part owner of the bakery, will be taking over.

"Horst appreciates everyone's business over the years and hopes that everyone continues to support his grandson," the post read.

"Tommy has been an employee at the bakery since it first opened so we are hoping for a smooth transition."

According to Thomas Gregory's wife, Angela Gregory, the bakery plans to keep both locations open at this time, however, there will be a change in the store's hours for its hilltop and its location downtown, where the bakery had already discontinued its warm breakfast items March 30, partly because of Mary Moehlmann's hospitalization.

The hilltop location will continue to be open Monday through Friday from 4:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., and 4:30 a.m. to noon on Saturday. The downtown location will be open Monday through Saturday, 5 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The Sweetest Bakery Contest in America last year named Horst's Little Bakery Haus the "sweetest of the sweet" in Indiana for 2018 in the second annual search for the sweetest shop in the country.

On March 9 of this year, after leaving the bakery at around 6 a.m., Horst and Mary Moehlmann were struck by a vehicle while crossing the street near Main and Cragmont.

Mary Moehlmann returned home last week, and, according to Angela Gregory, she will be needing 24-hour care.

"She still requires assistance with everything. She has physical, occupational and speech therapy coming a few times a week to help with some of her skills," Angela Gregory said in a text to The Madison Courier Friday morning.

"She spends most of her day in bed. Her family tries to do as much as possible to help Horst out with her. Tommy does a lot for them."

LATE START FOR FARMERS

Planting way behind

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

Farmers in Jefferson County — and the rest of Indiana — battled through constant spring rains last week to double the percentage of 2019 crop acres planted since June 2 but are still far behind normal.

It's a trend seen across the U.S.

A new U.S. Department of Agriculture report shows 67 percent of Indiana's expected corn crop is now planted. That's more than double the 31 percent as of June 2 but down from the five-year average of 98 percent being planted by now.

The figures have Indiana trailing most states in corn planting, with Ohio's 50 percent at the lowest level. In fact, many Ohio farmers have given up on this year's corn crop and are wondering if they will have any crops at all in 2019.

According to Lonnie Mason, Purdue extension director for Jefferson County, that's not the case here locally but farmers are certainly frustrated.

Mason did not have up-to-date figures on corn acres planted locally but he estimates that local farmers are right at the state average but those numbers can vary greatly from farm to farm.

"Farmers here are behind normal. It's all late," Mason said. "But a lot depends on your soil type, drainage and the equipment you have. With the right kind of soil and big enough equipment you can do a lot more in less time."

Purdue University agriculture professor Michael Langemeier said corn planting after early June is risky because it leaves a shorter growing season.

Mason said the sweet spot for corn production is to have seeds in the ground and growing by June 6 and that date has already passed. Planting later can reduce yield and start a cascade of issues in terms of productivity and harvest. Now that it's mid-June and more rain is in the forecast, it could get worse before it gets better for some growers.

Mason said northern Indiana, like Ohio, could already be past its cutoff date for planting corn and he guessed that many growers there are already switching their focus to soybeans.

Some growers in Jefferson County have been forced to make the same call. Whether farming hundreds of acres or not even 100, Mother Nature has been an uncooperative partner this spring for

Madison schools to leave S'east Career Center

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

Madison Consolidated Schools will withdraw from participation in the Southeastern Career Center in Versailles beginning with the fall of 2020.

Madison's school board at Wednesday's meeting approved a recommendation by Superintendent Jeff Studebaker to withdraw from the Center, a decision that allows Madison to give a required 12-month notice that students from Madison and funding on their behalf will end after this school year.

Studebaker said the benefits from attending the Career Center no longer match the financial obligation Madison pays into the facility. However, he added that the decision was based on more than just the financial commitment.

"This has not been an easy decision. I know that this is not going to be a popular decision with the schools that are participating in the Southeastern Career Center and I apologize to those that are because they are losing out on revenue and basically that's what this is about," Studebaker said. "We're spending $200,000 per year sending 20 kids to the Career Center. Given how everything has been evolving here in Madison with our partnerships with local industry, with our partnership with Ivy Tech and how things are going academically at the high school and the junior high there is no reason why we are spending that kind of money on a product that isn't matching what we're able to do here."

The Career Center is located in Versailles, about a 50-mile round-trip from Madison, meaning that students spend a good portion of their day on the commute rather than instruction. Having those students off campus also prevents them from taking advantage of other classes

Clifty Falls Park's pollinator events

National Pollinator Week is June 17-23, and Clifty Falls State Park will have five events in two days to celebrate the butterflies, bees, birds, moths and other wildlife that spread pollen so vegetables and fruits can reproduce.

The park's events, which are open to the public, do not require reservations and are free except for the gate fee, will be on Saturday, June 22 and Sunday, June 23.

Saturday, June 22

10 a.m. Butterfly and bee crafts at the Nature Center.

2 p.m. A Hummingbird's Life at the Nature Center.

7 p.m. On the Wings of a Butterfly at the park's outdoor pool, which is where a pollinator habitat has been planted.

Sunday, June 23

11 a.m. Planting for Pollinators at the park's outdoor pool, which is where a pollinator habitat has been planted.

2 p.m. Leaf-cutter Bees at the Nature Center.

First arrest made in animal cruelty at dairy farm

Indiana

FAIR OAKS — Authorities have arrested one of three people charged with animal cruelty after the release of video showing workers kicking and throwing young calves at an Indiana dairy farm that is an agritourism destination. The Newton County Sheriff's Department said Wednesday that Edgar Gardozo-Vasquez, 36, of Brook was taken into custody and is being held at the Newton County Jail on a felony charge of torturing or mutilating a vertebrate animal and misdemeanor animal cruelty at Fair Oaks Farms. The department says U.S. Immigration Customs Enforcement has placed a hold on Gardozo-Vasquez and there are outstanding warrants for two other former Fair Oaks worker, Santiago Ruvalcaba Contreros, 31, and Miguel Angel Navarro Serrano, 38, in the case. The animal rights group Animal Recovery Mission released video last week showing calves being thrown and kicked in the head by farm employees and the carcasses of dead calves piled together. Fair Oaks Farms' dairies, about 70 miles south of Chicago, draws about 500,000 tourists a year. It is the flagship farm for Fairlife, a national brand of higher protein, higher calcium and lower fat milk. Some retailers have pulled Fairlife products from their shelves, including Chicago-area groceries Jewel-Osco and Strack & Van Til and Family Express, which operates convenience stores across Indiana.

Ball State details cuts, approves tuition hike

MUNCIE — Ball State University said it was forced to eliminate 25 positions, curb travel and reduce supplies to avoid ending fiscal year 2019 with a budget shortfall. The school's board of trustees was given the update on Wednesday before the board approved a $391.2 million 2019-20 general fund budget that calls for an increase in tuition and fees of 1.25 percent that is the lowest increase since 1977. The reductions of 25 positions, travel spending and supply expenditures saved $4.5 million.

Ball State names college for trustee

MUNCIE — Ball State University has named its architecture school for a trustee who died in a plane crash in November. The College of Architecture and Planning will carry the name of R. Wayne Estopinal, a Jeffersonville architect. Rick Hall, chairman of Ball State's board of trustees, said Estopinal "gave his life while serving" the university. He was traveling to an alumni event in Chicago when his plane crashed after takeoff at Clark Regional Airport. Two other people also died. Only two of Ball State's colleges are named for someone.

Appeal in 120-year molestation sentence

JEFFERSONVILLE — A Jeffersonville man is appealing his 120-year prison sentence for molesting children while working at a YMCA and at an elementary school. Attorneys for Michael Begin Jr., 20, filed notice to appeal his sentence on May 29 and the appeal's transcript was completed in early June. Begin had pleaded guilty to 20 counts of child molestation and a Clark County judge sentenced him in April to the maximum 120-year sentence, with the final 20 years to be served on probation. Since Begin pleaded guilty, he cannot appeal his convictions, but can challenge his sentence. Authorities say Begin molested 20 children between the ages of 3 and 8 while working at the Clark County Family YMCA and as an elementary school teaching assistant.

Franklin president stepping down in 2020

FRANKLIN — Franklin College said its president, Thomas J. Minar, plans to step down after the 2019-2020 academic year. Minar issued a statement this week that the suburban Indianapolis school has much to celebrate, including fundraising efforts, a new strategic plan and an inclusive student experience. He said the "dedicated stewardship" of the school's faculty and administrative teams is key in the school's success. Franklin College last month announced it had exceeded its $10 million fundraising goal to support construction and renovation of a new $17 million science facility. The goal was topped for the Campaign for the Sciences, which is helping to pay for the Franklin College Science Center that fully opened in January. Minar became Franklin College's 16th president on July 1, 2015.

Butler plans $100M science complex

INDIANAPOLIS Butler University is planning a $100-million upgrade and expansion of its science facilities that will become the school's largest-single investment to date. The private Indianapolis college announced Thursday that its trustees approved the three-phase project last week to create 96,000-square-feet of space for a science complex featuring "high-tech classrooms, modern research labs, and collaborative working spaces." Construction on the first two phases is expected to be completed within about 18 months. Butler's science program enrollment has increased 70 percent over the past decade, causing the science department to outgrow its space. Administrators hope to raise at least $42 million for the project through philanthropy, and have already secured $27.5 million in donations. A bond issue will fund the remainder.

Can reject insanity defense, judge rules

JEFFERSONVILLE — An Indiana judge has ruled a man accused of killing his ex-girlfriend and eating parts of her body can reject an insanity defense. Joseph Oberhansley is accused of killing and mutilating Tammy Jo Blanton, 46, in Jeffersonville in 2014. He faces trial on Aug. 19. Oberhansley, 38, filed a motion last month to withdraw the insanity defense, which defense attorneys promoted in January. Oberhansley told the judge he felt using the defense would admit guilt and is unlikely to work. In her ruling Tuesday, Clark County Circuit Court Judge Vicki Carmichael used related case law to support her finding on the importance of allowing a defendant to make decisions on key elements of the case.

Teen killed while dad meeting online buyer

GARY — Police say a teenager who accompanied his father to sell an Xbox was killed in Gary. Commander Jack Hamady says the 16-year-old Merrillville boy was in a car when he was shot Wednesday. The boy's father had arranged to sell an Xbox to someone who had connected with him online. The Lake County coroner's office identified the victim as Johnny Peluyera. No arrests have been made. Gary police say online sellers and buyers should meet at a police station parking lot or a public place.

Tipton homes empty after crash, acid spill

TIPTON — Authorities say homes are being evacuated following a crash that led to a hydrochloric acid spill. The Tipton Police Department said the crash Friday morning happened at an intersection of U.S. highway 31 in Tipton County, about 35 miles north of Indianapolis. WXIN-TV reported some houses near the highway in the area were evacuated due to a smoky cloud from the crash site. No injuries were immediately reported.

First chemical weapon destroyed at facility

RICHMOND — Officials have begun destroying Cold-War era chemical weapons that have been stored at the Blue Grass Army Depot for decades. A mustard-agent munition was successfully destroyed Friday in Richmond, marking the beginning of the facility's static detonation chamber operations, which will handle munitions that are unsuitable for automated destruction at the depot's pilot plant. Last month, officials including U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell and Kentucky Gov. Matt Bevin gathered at the depot to ceremonially mark the beginning of the destruction of the weapons. The depot has a stockpile of about 523 tons of mustard, GB and VX nerve agent. The pilot plant was finished in 2015, but operators and staff trained for years to prepare for the destruction operations.

4 counties launch text 911 service

LEXINGTON — Officials say people in four central Kentucky counties can now use texting to communicate with emergency dispatchers. Lexington Mayor Linda Gorton said in a statement on Thursday that people can now send text messages to 9-1-1 call centers in Fayette, Jessamine, Garrard and Lincoln counties. She said operators can also send text messages to a 9-1-1 caller if needed. Lexington Division of Enhanced 9-1-1 Director Robert Stack says text messages should include the location of the emergency and an explanation of the help needed. He says messages should be brief and shouldn't include photos or videos, which can't be sent.

Fort celebrates army's 244th birthday

FORT CAMPBELL — Soldiers and others at Fort Campbell have marked the Army's 244th birthday with a celebration at the post on the Kentucky-Tennessee state line. Celebrating Thursday were leaders of the 101st Airborne Division, Blanchfield Army Community Hospital, U.S. Army Garrison Fort Campbell, tenant units and civilian guests.

High court rules police can be sued in chase

LEXINGTON — The Kentucky Supreme Court has ruled that police can be sued for damages when their car chases lead to the death or injury of third parties. The Lexington Herald-Leader reported the court's 6-1 ruling on Thursday overturned a 1952 decision that had granted police blanket immunity. The ruling will align Kentucky practice with that of most other states where juries are allowed to decide whether police are at fault. In the case at hand, the children of Luis Gonzalez will be allowed to sue the Scott County sheriff and a deputy for damages related to their father's death. Gonzalez died in 2014 when a suspected drug dealer crashed head-on into his vehicle during a chase.

Driver dragged officer through Kroger lot

LOUISVILLE — A man is accused of trapping a Kentucky trooper's arm in his car window and dragging the officer through a Kroger parking lot before later nearly crashing into other officers. Thomas Trummer Jr., 26, was arrested Thursday in Louisville on charges including third-degree assault. The charges stem from a Tuesday clash between Trummer and the trooper. Police say a patrolling trooper noticed Trummer slumped over in his car and approached him. They say the trooper had an arm through Trummer's window when Trummer rolled it up and drove off, dragging the trooper. An arrest warrant was issued, but Trummer evaded authorities until Thursday when he

Agriculture agencies headed to Kansas City region

By APRIL SIMPSON
Stateline
stateline.org

In a highly anticipated announcement, Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue said Thursday that the Kansas City region will be the new headquarters for two U.S. Department of Agriculture agencies.

The Kansas City region was picked over the North Carolina Research Triangle area and multiple locations in Indiana for the new headquarters.

The 58-year-old Economic Research Service (ERS) analyzes agricultural and rural economics, and the grant-making National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA) uses agricultural research to inform science policy decision-making.

They are the only two USDA agencies without a presence outside Washington, and the move puts them closer to agricultural producers, the department said. It also said the move will cut costs, improve its ability to recruit top talent — in part because of the lower cost of living in Kansas City — and boost the Kansas City economy.

"The Kansas City Region has proven itself to be a hub for all things agriculture and is a booming city in America's heartland," Perdue said in a statement. He added that the move allows the agencies "to increase efficiencies and effectiveness and bring important resources and manpower closer to all of our customers."

But critics, including the American Statistical Association, argue that these economists, scientists, statisticians and others belong in the center of federal power. They argue the move could potentially diminish the importance and influence of the agencies' work at a critical time for the agricultural, food and rural economies by weakening crucial links with other D.C.-area research organizations within the government and private sectors.

The move comes amid ongoing arguments over decentralizing the federal government, including the FBI's possible departure from the outdated building that takes up a full city block in downtown Washington. Some from both ends of the political spectrum have subscribed to the idea of dispersing the federal government to shift wealth from the East Coast to economically depressed areas.

ERS economists have argued that the Trump administration orchestrated their D.C. exit after their work on sensitive issues, such as the financial harm of President Donald Trump's trade policies to farmers, cast the administration in a negative light.

NIFA employees have similarly called the move unjustified. Two days before Thursday's announcement, they voted 137-2 to unionize.

"Not only were stakeholders entirely cut out of this process, they were blindsided by the announcement from USDA last August," U.S. Rep. Stacey Plaskett, a Virgin Islands Democrat and chairwoman of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Biotechnology, Horticulture and Research, said in opening remarks during a June 5 hearing, where no witnesses spoke in support of the move. "And to date, the actual benefits to ag research or an economic analysis of this proposal have not been conveyed."

The House and Senate have taken steps to block the relocation, including not providing any funding, a decision supported by dozens of academic, statistical, research and producer groups. But the relocation may progress before the House appropriations bill for fiscal 2020 USDA funding becomes law.

The Department of Agriculture was offered more than $26 million in relocation incentive packages from state and local governments, according to the agency.

The move is expected to save the department about $20 million a year, or nearly $300 million over a 15-year lease, in employment and rent costs, according to the department's analysis.

Tim Cowden, president and CEO of the Kansas City Area Development Council, which submitted a proposal in support of the move, called the agencies the "crown jewels" of the USDA.

"It's a significant win for the Kansas City region," Cowden said. "Any time 500-plus well-paid scientific and other high-level jobs are added into the economy, it will provide a noticeable boost."

Cowden empathized with the stress employees may face in planning their moves but expects the transplants to enjoy their new home base.

"People come to Kansas City and they're absolutely blown away by what a wonderful community this is," Cowden said.

The move comes during a steady erosion of the federal workforce in the Washington region, which is down about 25,000 jobs from 2010, said Stephen S. Fuller, director of the Stephen S. Fuller Institute for Research on the Washington Region's Economic Future at the Schar School of Policy and Government at George Mason University in Arlington, Virginia.

The nearly 550 employees slated to move to the new headquarters — 253 from ERS and 294 from NIFA — make up about 0.15 percent of the 360,000-person federal workforce in the Washington region.

The relocated employees would take an estimated $126 million from the region's economy, an insignificant figure considering the Washington area's half-a-trillion-dollar economy, Fuller said.

The jobs won't be as valuable to smaller economies like the Kansas City region, because employees may look elsewhere for desired services, Fuller said.

"It's an agglomeration effect," Fuller said. "That's why we put up with all the congestion in Washington, because you can find anything you need."

In addition, the move will cause attrition. In April, six ERS economists quit in one day, according to news reports. In a June 5 letter to Perdue and Emily Murphy, administrator of the General Services Administration, several senators noted that by the USDA's own estimates, the two agencies will lose half of their staff.

Once these agencies leave, it wouldn't be cost-effective to bring them back, Fuller said.

"There's probably not a good reason to do it other than political, and it does have a cost," Fuller said.

Toll rates on bridges to increase

From News and Tribune
(Jeffersonville & New Albany)

LOUISVILLE — New toll rates for three bridges connecting Louisville and Southern Indiana begin next month. The 2.5 percent increase is effective July 1.

The new rate for a passenger vehicle with a prepaid account and transponder is $2.10 per crossing. The current toll rate is $2.05 per crossing.

Drivers with prepaid accounts in good standing and transponders always pay the lowest toll rates. Drivers save more than $2 per crossing. The easiest way to maintain a positive account balance is by choosing auto-replenishment and linking the account to a valid payment method.

RiverLink is the all-electronic tolling system for the Louisville – Southern Indiana Ohio River Bridges Project, with no stopping, no slowing and no lines. New toll rates will range from $2.10 to $12.61, depending on the size of the vehicle and whether the driver has a prepaid account.

Tolling is in place on the Interstate-65 Abraham Lincoln Bridge, I-65 Kennedy Bridge and SR 265/KY 841 Lewis and Clark Bridge connecting Prospect and Utica.

Toll rates increase annually by 2.5 percent, unless the rate of inflation (as measured by the Consumer Price Index) is higher. Tolls increase every July 1. There was not an increase in 2017 because tolling had been in place for less than a year. Tolling, a bi-state effort between Indiana and Kentucky, started Dec. 30, 2016.

Muhammad Ali mural vandalized in Louisville

LOUISVILLE — A vandal has painted the words "racist," "antisemitic" and "homophobe" on a mural of boxing champ Muhammad Ali in Kentucky. The words were painted in orange over Ali's portion of the "Kentucky Rushmore" mural that features other icons from the state, including Abraham Lincoln. The mural is on the other side of a building that houses a candy store and an employee at the shop first noticed the graffiti Wednesday morning. The vandalism came days after Louisville's Ali Week, a celebration of the Kentucky native, who died in 2016. The words have since been painted over in white. It's unclear whether police have identified a suspect.

UK coach signs $86M, 10-year extension

LEXINGTON — Kentucky coach John Calipari has signed a 10-year contract extension through 2029 worth $86 million that includes an option in the sixth year to step down and become a special assistant to the athletic director or university representative. The 60-year-old coach, who is 305-71 in his 11th season at UK, and the school previously announced an agreement to a long-term deal in April. He will earn $8 million each of the next two seasons before his salary increases to $8.5 million annually in 2021 and $9 million annually in 2025. Beginning with the 2024-25 season, Calipari has the option to step down and into the university position that will pay $950,000 annually.

Climate change on Hoosier minds

Survey finds large majority in state believe in climate change

By ENRIQUE SAENZ and BETH EDWARDS
Indiana Environmental Reporter

A new poll indicates that a large majority of Hoosiers believe climate change is happening to some extent and are supportive of measures to address its impact on the state.

Some 80 percent of Hoosiers polled in a survey commissioned by the Environmental Resilience Institute at Indiana University say they believe climate change is happening. Slightly fewer, 65 percent, say they believe in climate change more than they did five years ago.

"I think this survey shows to some degree, that most people are really accepting the reality of climate change, and there is more agreement on the fact we need to have some kind of responses to it," said James Shanahan, associate director of ERI and dean of The Media School at Indiana University.

Of the 1,002 polled, the majority agreed that flooding is becoming more frequent and potholes are becoming worse because of more severe weather. Seventy percent believe the weather is becoming less predictable.

Along political lines, 66 percent of Hoosier Republicans surveyed believe that climate change is happening either somewhat or to a great extent, compared to 91 percent of Democrats.

Seventy-five percent of those polled said they would support general initiatives designed to prepare Indiana for the effects of climate change, and 60 percent believe climate change is already starting to harm people in the U.S.

"These survey results suggest that Hoosiers know we must act now to protect the environment we have, while we have it," said Janet McCabe, ERI's assistant director of policy and implementation and former assistant administrator at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. "And as we continue to observe the consequences of a changing climate — such as recent historic flooding or record-setting cold — the challenge is hitting close to home. That's especially true fora pillar of our state's economy: our farmers and all of us who depend of them for food."

ERI will be putting another, more extensive survey into the field this summer that will add further detail about Hoosiers' thoughts on environmental change.

The survey will give ERI, researchers and citizens more information to help local communities and continue the conversation about environmental resilience around the state.

What do Hoosiers think about climate change? The Environmental Resilience Institute of Indiana University conducted a survey of 1,002 indiana residents about their views on the environment and climate. Here were some of their findings:

Native plants may be at greater risk than non-natives

BLOOMINGTON — As spring advances across the Midwest, a new study looking at blooming flowers suggests that non-native plants might outlast native plants in the region due to climate change.

The study — led by researchers at Indiana University's Environmental Resilience Institute, part of IU's Prepared for Environmental Change Grand Challenge initiative, and Michigan State University — has revealed that warming temperatures affect native and non-native flowering plants differently, which could change the look of local landscapes over time.

The study was published May 28 in the journal Ecology Letters.

"The timing of a plant's life cycle is crucial for species survival," said study co-author Jen Lau, an associate professor in the IU Bloomington College of Arts and Sciences' Department of Biology and a member of the Environmental Resilience Institute. "When a plant flowers determines whether it will be pollinated by bees or other insects and how much time it will have to produce seeds. Our data makes me worry that we will have a very weedy world in our future."

The researchers' findings suggest non-native plant species may be better at shifting their flowering time compared to native plant species. These differences are thought to influence a species' success both now and in future warmer environments.

To test this hypothesis, Lau and her students simulated global warming in fields planted with 45 native and non-native species. Some areas were warmed by infrared heaters, while other areas were not. Lau's lab surveyed all plants to determine when they first flowered and how long they flowered.

When grown in warmed plots simulating the climate change expected in the Midwest by the end of the century, the researchers found that non-native species flowered more than 11 days earlier on average. In contrast, native species did not shift flowering times at all when warmed.

"We also found that earlier-flowering non-native species had greater geographic spread, suggesting that flowering earlier may help promote successful establishment across large areas," said the study's lead author Meredith Zettlemoyer, a Ph.D. student at Michigan State University, where Lau was previously on faculty.

The findings suggest important differences in how native and non-native plant species' respond to climate change. Because other studies have shown that species which failed to shift their flowering times over the past century were more likely to decline in abundance or go extinct, native species may be more susceptible to climate change than non-natives species.

"Species across the globe are showing us that the climate is changing in ways that affect them," Lau said. "Flowering earlier in the spring is a big sign that the climate is changing and may be a key strategy for surviving climate change. Maybe the native species that aren't very good at blooming earlier under warmer temperatures possess other strategies for surviving climate change, but if they don't, they could be in serious danger."

About this

This study was funded by the National Science Foundation and conducted at Michigan State University's Kellogg Biological Station Long-Term Ecological Research Program, which studies the ecology of intensive field crop ecosystems as part of a national network of Long-Term Ecological Research sites established by the NSF.

The Environmental Resilience Institute, founded as part of Indiana University's Prepared for Environmental Change Grand Challenge initiative, brings together a broad, bipartisan coalition of government, business, nonprofit and community leaders to help Indiana better prepare for the challenges that environmental changes bring to our economy, health and livelihood. Announced in May 2017, Prepared for Environmental Change is working to deliver tailored and actionable solutions to communities across the state of Indiana.

Students working with cities on greenhouse emissions

This summer as part of the Indiana Sustainability Development Program, Indiana University students are working with several local governments in Indiana to complete community-scale greenhouse gas inventories.

The Resilience Cohort is a new project under Sustain IU's extern program, supported by the McKinney Family Foundation, resulting from a new partnership with the Environmental Resilience Institute, founded as part of the IU Prepared for Environmental Change Grand Challenge initiative.

"I am thrilled that the Resilience Cohort was launched this summer as part of the Indiana Sustainability Development Program," said Andrew Predmore, director of sustainability at IU. "Not only are these students developing professionally, but they are also making real sustainability contributions to the state of Indiana by doing the foundational work needed to seriously address the challenges posed by climate change."

The eight students in the first Resilience Cohort will be hosted by cities, towns and counties committed to addressing the challenges associated with climate change. The students will complete greenhouse gas inventories for their host communities, which will provide data on topics such as the amount of energy consumed, the diversity of the energy supplied to their grid and residents' vehicle types and fuel usages.

Communities can use the inventories' data to set targets for reducing greenhouse gas emissions and develop a plan for achieving these goals. Students will analyze the results to help their host local governments understand the data, a critical step in larger efforts to reduce emissions and adapt to the changes affecting Hoosier communities.

Bloomington, Carmel, Columbus, Delaware County/ Muncie, Evansville, Fort Wayne, Gary, Greencastle, Goshen, Michigan City, Oldenburg, Richmond and West Lafayette will each complete greenhouse gas inventories. Several communities will work with non-ISDP-affiliated externs.

The Resilience Cohort is part of a larger group within the Indiana Sustainability Development Program, which includes undergraduate and graduate students majoring in subjects such as sustainability, environmental science, business and public policy. Each student engages in a 10-week externship to develop sustainability skills with businesses, nonprofits and municipalities across the state. The partner organizations receive increased work capacity to tackle sustainability topics such as energy conservation, renewable energy and recycling.

The number of students participating in the program has grown from 15 to 30 annually since its establishment three years ago. This year's program began May 13, when 30 IU students gathered in Indianapolis for a three-day intensive "boot camp" training before their externships started.

"We are delighted these Indiana cities are welcoming our IU students to work with them on ways to reduce carbon emissions and enhance air quality," said Ellen Ketterson, director of the Environmental Resilience Institute and IU Distinguished Professor of Biology.

As part of the Resilience Cohort, participants have access to technical resources, a peer network and training through ICLEI-Local Governments for Sustainability, a nonprofit that specializes in helping local governments with emissions inventories. The greenhouse gas inventories will be completed by September.

Targeted patrol leads to multiple drug counts, over dozen charged

Courier staff report

State Police in southern Indiana this week charged more than a dozen people on various drug counts over a two-day enforcement operation on Interstate 65 in Clark and Scott counties.

The All Crimes Policing (ACP) squad from the Sellersburg Post conducted a targeted drug patrol that resulted in the arrest of 14 people on various drug charges ranging from possession of marijuana to methamphetamine and even fentanyl-laced heroin.

The ACP squad, a nine-trooper unit that includes K-9 Teague and his handler, Trooper Nathan Abbott, and K-9 Riggs and his handler, Trooper Zach Smith, on Wednesday and Thursday patrolled I-65 in Clark and Scott counties stopping vehicles for a variety of traffic violations.

As a result of those traffic stops and subsequent investigations, 14 people were either arrested or cited for drug charges. There list included 27 total charges with eight felonies. In addition, 22 citations and 82 warnings were also issued.

Those arrested and incarcerated at the Clark County Jail included:

• Timothy Allen, 40, Austin, possession of a narcotic-Level 6 felony and possession of methamphetamine-Level 6 Felony.

• Darek C. Powers, 40, Scottsburg, possession of a narcotic-Level 6 felony.

• Ashley Danielle Nicole Sullivan, 26, Austin, possession of a syringe-Level 6 felony, possession of Heroin-Level 6 felony, and trafficking with an inmate-Level 5 felony.

• Scott Allen Dorris, 50, Trafalgar, possession of a narcotic (heroin/fentanyl)-Level 6 felony, possession of a syringe-level 6 felony.

• Jason C. McComb, 25, Jeffersonville, false informing-Class B misdemeanor.

Drug charges against 2 in Madison traffic stop

Courier staff report

A Madison man and woman are facing drugs charges in connection with an afternoon traffic stop in the 300 block of Vernon Street on Monday, June 10.

The driver of the vehicle, Brandon W. Pyles, 33, has been charged with possession of methamphetamine, a Level 6 felony, possession of drug paraphernalia, a Class C misdemeanor and operating a vehicle with expired registration and no insurance. A passenger in the vehicle, Anngela C. Roberts, 41, was charged with possession of methamphetamine, a Level 6 felony, and possession of drug paraphernalia, a Class C misdemeanor.

The charges stem from a traffic stop executed by Madison Police Officer Brittany Tate at 1:25 p.m. after she noticed a silver Chevrolet Impala with a registration plate that expired in 2017. While approaching the vehicle, Tate also noticed "numerous pill bottles" in the car and a plastic container in the area where the radio had been removed from the vehicle.

A search of the vehicle soon produced from the plastic container a plastic straw with residue that tested positive for methamphetamine and several zip-style plastic bags on the front passenger floorboard. One bag one contained a glass smoking pipe that also had residue that tested positive for methamphetamine. Five additional glass pipes were found in the trunk of the vehicle and all contained residue that tested positive for methamphetamine.

Both Pyles and Roberts were arrested.

Bedford man injured, Louisville woman killed in US42 crash

Courier special report

A Trimble County man was injured in a crash that killed a Louisville women on US 42 in Oldham County on Sunday.

Michael Edington, 24, of Bedford, was traveling westbound in the 8900 block of US 42 Sunday morning when a 2018 Honda Accord operated by Paula Morales Garcia, 21 of Louisville, crossed the center line in a curve and struck Edington's 1996 Chevrolet Blazer for unknown reasons.

Garcia was dead at the scene while Edington was taken to University of Louisville Hospitial. No information on his condition is known.

The Oldham County Police Department, North Oldham Fire and Oldham County EMS responded.

An investigation has not determined any contributing factors at this time. Anyone with information on the incident is asked to call Oldham County Police at (502) 222-1300.

Madison to flush hydrants on hilltop

The Madison Water Department has scheduled hydrant flushing for the Madison Hilltop starting Monday, June 17 and continuing through June 21.

The work will begin at 8 a.m. daily. If residents experience dirty water after hydrants are flushed, they should run cold water until the water that comes from the tap is clear. In case of inclement weather or water emergencies, the dates and times are subject to change.

Congregation of Holy Cross names 15 priests who abused

By CALEB BAUER
South Bend Tribune

The Congregation of Holy Cross, the Catholic religious order that founded the University of Notre Dame and Holy Cross College, on Wednesday released a list of priests credibly accused of sexual abuse of minors.

One of those priests, John Fitzgerald, worked as the director of campus ministries at the University of Notre Dame beginning in 1980.

The move comes during the same week that the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops meets in Baltimore to consider instituting accountability for bishop misconduct amid calls for more transparency and further investigation.

The list names 14 Holy Cross priests and one seminarian, and was published along with a letter from the Rev. William Lies, the provincial superior of the U.S. province of the Congregation of Holy Cross. According to the congregation, the last incident of alleged abuse occurred in 1991.

"Over the last two decades, but particularly in the last year, we have all become more aware of the problem of sexual abuse of children within the Catholic Church and its mishandling," Lies wrote. "I am profoundly sorry for the pain and suffering inflicted on anyone who has been abused or impacted in any way by the actions of any of our members."

Who is on the list?

Of the 15 names on the list, 10 of the alleged abusers are dead and two have been removed from ministry. Three are no longer in the congregation, including Paul LeBrun, the former pastor at Little Flower Catholic Church in South Bend who currently is serving time in prison in Arizona for abusing minors.

Ten of the priests at some point were assigned in Indiana, though only three credible accusations came from survivors in Indiana, according to the Congregation of Holy Cross. Three of the accused priests were assigned to Notre Dame at some point during their careers.

Angela Knight, spokeswoman for the Congregation of Holy Cross, said in an email that the list "will be updated as necessary on our website" if more victims come forward and as allegations are investigated.

"The U.S. Province is releasing the list at this time because it wants to help victim-survivors in their healing," Knight wrote.

The list of priests assigned in Indiana are as follows:

John Fitzgerald — Assignments in Indiana, California, Arizona and Illinois. Fitzgerald studied at the University of Notre Dame, receiving his bachelor's degree in 1965. He taught at St. Joseph High School in 1969, according to Tribune archives. He later became the director of campus ministry at the University of Notre Dame in 1980, after spending three years as the associate director of campus ministry.

According to the Holy Cross list, Fitzgerald's one accusation of abuse came from the time he worked at Notre Dame High School in Illinois in the 1970s. That allegation, received by Holy Cross in 1992, caused him to be removed from ministry in 1992 and he left Holy Cross in 1997.

Archibald McDowell — Assignments in Indiana, Louisiana, Texas and Oregon. McDowell became a faculty member of religion at the University of Notre Dame in 1945, according to Tribune archives. Multiple allegations were received against him in 1949 and the 1950s from abuse in Indiana, Oregon and Lousiana, according to Holy Cross. He was permanently removed from ministry in 1962 and died in 1994.

David Verhalen — Assignments in Indiana and Illinois. Verhalen was permanently removed from ministry in 2001, and one allegation from an assignment in Illinois in the 1970s was received in 2007. He was assigned to the University of Notre Dame and the now closed LeMans Academy in Rolling Prairie at some point in his career. He died in 2012.

Edgar Szymanski — Assignments in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan. Szymanski was ordained in 1943, according to Tribune reports. He was assigned as assistant pastor at St. Stanislaus, St. Casimir and St. Hedwig's Church in South Bend until 1950, when he was appointed chaplain and religion teacher at Gilmore Academy for Boys near Cleveland.

He assisted at St. John the Baptist parish as of 1993, according to Tribune archives. Multiple allegations against him from his time in Michigan were received in 1999 and 2018, after his death in 1998.

Randall Blum — Seminarian in Indiana. Blum was charged with two counts of child molesting in 1986 in St. Joseph County Superior Court, after allegedly touching and fondling a 13-year-old and 16-year-old boy during activities he sponsored as a volunteer counselor at Christ the King school.

He pleaded guilty to one of the charges after admitting to police he had touched "several" teenage boys, according to court filings from then. The allegations against him were received after he had already been dismissed from seminary, according to the Holy Cross.

Louis Meyer — Assignments in Indiana and California. Meyer was an assistant pastor at Holy Cross Church, and later became assistant pastor at St. Francis Xavier Church in Burbank, Calif. He withdrew from the Congregation of Holy Cross in 1974. He has one credible accusation of abuse from the 1960s during his time in California, which was received by the Archdiocese of Los Angeles in 2007.

According to Tribune archives, Meyer was district superior for Holy Cross missions in Uganda and British East Africa beginning in 1961. The Congregation of Holy Cross listed his status as unknown.

Cornelius Ryan — Assignments in Indiana and abroad in Africa. Ryan was credibly accused in 2014 and removed as administrator of St. Joseph Hessen Cassel in Fort Wayne. He had been accused of sexually abusing children in Africa 20 years earlier. When confronted by diocesan officials, Ryan admitted to sexually abusing a child, according to news reports. Ryan worked from 2002 to 2011 at Little Flower in South Bend. His faculties for ministry were removed in 2013.

James Trepanier — Assignments in Indiana and Oregon. Trepanier was assigned to Holy Cross Parish in South Bend from 1981 to 1987, and then was at St. Pius X Parish in Granger until 1991, when the Congregation of Holy Cross restricted his ministry. According to the Fort Wayne-South Bend Diocese, his faculties for ministry were removed in 2002 after one credible allegation of abuse. He also was assigned to the University of Portland in Oregon. Holy Cross documents state he is currently in a nursing facility "with no access to minors."

Paul LeBrun — Assignments in Indiana and Arizona. LeBrun was a Holy Cross priest who was assigned at Little Flower in South Bend in two separate stints in the 1980s and 1990s. He was at Little Flower from 1983 to 1986 before moving to Arizona. He then returned to Little Flower as senior pastor until he left abruptly in 1999, citing health reasons.

The diocese says LeBrun was the subject of one allegation. But a Tribune report in 2002 detailed allegations by four South Bend men who said LeBrun had sexually abused them when they were younger. The report caught the attention of other victims who came forward in Arizona. LeBrun was charged criminally in Arizona, and he was convicted in 2005 on six counts of sexual abuse and sentenced to over 100 years in prison. He was defrocked in 2008.

The late John D'Arcy, former bishop of the Fort Wayne-South Bend Diocese, previously said he didn't know about sexual abuse allegations against LeBrun until 1999, when he immediately asked him to resign.

Ralph Luczak — Assignments in Indiana and Illinois. Luczak was assigned to Christ the King Parish in South Bend during his career, and also spent time at Notre Dame High School in Illinois. He died in 1970.

Let Us Pause to Honor the Memory of

Mrs. Alma Loretta Johnson Boldery

Mrs. Alma Loretta Johnson Boldery, age 74, of Milton, Kentucky entered this life on May 18, 1945, in Jefferson County, Indiana. She was the loving daughter of the late William Goebel and Rotha Cull Johnson. She was raised and resided in Jefferson County until she was untied in marriage to Gayle Kenneth Boldery on June 23, 1961 in Madison, Indiana. This happy union of 58 years was blessed with three children, Kenneth Gayle, Loretta and Dave. Alma worked for the U.S. Shoe Company in Vevay and retired as a repairer after 25 years of service. She then began working for the Trimble County Elementary School as a cook for eight years. Her years spent at the Elementary school and being with the kids was part of her favorite years of work. While working she was a full-time homemaker, devoted wife, loving mother and adoring grandmother. Alma was a member of Milton Baptist Church where she taught children's Sunday School for 32 years. Alma loved socializing with people, cooking, squirrel watching and crocheting, especially baby blankets. She adored her grandchildren and loved to spend time with them. Her favorite holiday was Christmas. Going to the Smokey Mountains and making memories brought much joy to Alma and her family. Alma fought a courageous battle for the past years but this time her Lord and Savior gave her a mountain that she could not climb. Alma passed away on Wednesday, June 12, 2019, at 9:15 p.m. at her home with her beloved husband and family at her side.

National Pollinator Week

Pollinator walk will enable all to enjoy butterflies and bees

By LIZ BROWNLEE

Save the bees! This slogan is showing up on t-shirts, tote bags and stickers. An evening walk at Hilltop Farm Nature Preserve in Dearborn County near West Harrison, Indiana, will celebrate native pollinators including bees, butterflies and birds.

If you want to show your love for native pollinators, and see a field of native wildflowers in bloom, join us. The walk is free and open to the public.

The walk will be at 6 p.m. Sunday, June 23 at the end of National Pollinator Week. The walk will be on a grassy path.

Oak Heritage owns 13 nature preserves that are free and open to the public, including Hilltop Farm. In 2017, Oak Heritage restored a 13-acre field into native wildflowers at Hilltop Farm Nature Preserve. The preserve is 120 acres, including forests and hiking trails.

This year, the conservancy is adding nine acres of pollinator habitat.

"Oak Heritage is doing a great job at Hilltop Farm," said Fred McCarter, executive director of the foundation. "The foundation is gratified to help play a role in providing this beautiful recreational and educational experience to Dearborn County residents and tourists. We hope folks will take the time to visit Hilltop and enjoy the beauty of our county."

Pollinators are hurting, but the good news is that we can do a lot to help them.

Bee and butterfly populations are declining because of habitat loss and extensive pesticide use in yards, gardens and farms, according to the Pollinator Partnership (pollinator.org), which leads National Pollinator Week.

But folks in southeastern Indiana are doing a lot to help pollinators. Local businesses, farmers and homeowners are adding native wildflower plantings and saving some space for pollinators on their land.

There are also several groups hosted hands-on activities for children in gardens over spring break.

In Jefferson County, the county's Soil and Water Conservation District had a plant sale and sold almost 6,000 pollinator plants. The Pollinator Action Group, a part of the district, planted six pollinator habitats in visible areas, using a grant from the Community Foundation of Madison and Jefferson County.

Students at Crothersville Jr/Sr High School recently created a pollinator habitat at one of the town's parks. Now, they can register their planting and "bee" counted. Students (left to right) are Corey Engleking, Elliana Coleman and Addie Otte.

Liz Brownlee is the executive director of Oak Heritage Conservancy (oakheritageconservancy.org), a nonprofit that creates nature preserves — including two in Jefferson County — and helps connect people with nature. Liz and her husband have a sustainable farm in Crothersville. Her goal is to help make southeastern Indiana a thriving, vibrant place to live and play. She coordinated this project.

Register your habitat to 'bee' counted and see it grow

By LIZ BROWNLEE

The map of the United States seems to be covered in orange dots, each one representing a pollinator habitat. More than 1 million have been planted in the last few years. But zoom in to southeastern Indiana, and the "dots" are fewer and farther between.

The map of habitats is phenomenal to see. The Oak Heritage Conservancy creates nature preserves around southeastern Indiana that are open to the public.

We created a 13-acre pollinator habitat at one of our nature preserves, and so we wanted to add it to the map and be part of the fun. But when I registered, I saw that on the map, southeastern Indiana is pretty bare.

I was really surprised because we know that people have planted a ton of pollinator habitat recently.

The "Share Some Space" group in Jennings County was the first in the area to make progress for pollinators.

In three years, the group helped homeowners, farmers and schools create more than 800 habitats in Jennings County.

Several groups are following suit around southeastern Indiana, including the Jefferson County Pollinator Action Group, which Oak Heritage helps with.

This spring, the Pollinator Action Group is helping hundreds of homeowners create habitat.

And there are others doing the same thing in Bartholomew and Dearborn counties, and really all over southeastern Indiana.

It always feels good to realize that your hard work is part of something bigger, and that lots of other people care about pollinators and nature, too. We want to show just how much good is happening in southeastern Indiana.

Native pollinators' populations have been suffering because of habitat loss and pesticide use.

Homeowners all across the U.S. have responded to pollinators' need by creating habitats in side yards and other "extra" spaces over the last few years. They have also been registering their plantings and adding their orange dots to the map with the "Million Pollinator Garden Challenge."

The challenge was sponsored by the National Pollinator Garden Network.

The goal was to get people excited about creating habitat – and increase the food and breeding sites available all across the country.

In less than five years, individuals, church groups, farmers, schools and community groups have created more than 1,000,000 habitats. Now the goal is to build on that momentum and fill in gaps in the landscape where there aren't registered pollinator habitats.

For pollinators, there genuinely is strength in numbers.

Helping restore pollinator habitat is a little different than other types of conservation.

If you're trying to protect many types of wildlife – let's say Eastern box turtles — you need hundreds of acres of forest to actually be sure that the species has enough room to forage, to breed successfully and raise young. That's where a group like Oak Heritage Conservancy can help. We can bring people together to protect large chunks of habitat.

But if you're trying to save the pollinators – well, everyone can help. Pollinators can thrive with lots of small habitats spread over the landscape. Even a 10 foot by 10 foot planting can make a real difference for native bees, butterflies, moths and other pollinators.

Adding your pollinator habitat to the map is quick and painless. Any size pollinator habitat counts, whether you planted in your side yard or whole farm fields.

And don't worry about the timing. You can add a U.S. Department of Agriculture Conservation Reserve Program planting that you did a few years ago, or a little garden you planted last year, and even the habitat that you're establishing this year.

To register, go to pollinator.org/mpgcmap/register#form and fill in the basic details about the habitat, such as the rough size and type of planting (home garden, farm, rooftop garden, etc.).

There's so much energy for pollinators in southeastern Indiana. Let's put your good work on the map.

Liz Brownlee is the executive director of Oak Heritage Conservancy (oakheritageconservancy.org), a nonprofit that creates nature preserves — including two in Jefferson County — and helps connect people with nature. Liz and her husband have a sustainable farm in Crothersville. Her goal is to help make southeastern Indiana a thriving, vibrant place to live and play. She coordinated this project.

some.

Tom Matthews, a seventh generation farmer near Hanover, was taking advantage of a break in the rains Thursday to seed about a 40-acre no-till plot on County Road 650W and even then raindrops spattered the windshield of his tractor from time to time. Like a lot of farmers, his plans to grow more corn this season had given way to an 86-acre crop of soybeans.

"We really wanted to grow corn this year because the price looks like it's going to be pretty good," said Matthews, who works the small family farm he owns with his siblings. "But the weather didn't allow it, so we've switched to soybeans."

Corn and soybeans are huge crops in Jefferson County as well as Indiana.

In 2016 Jefferson County planted 13,000 acres of corn and 40,000 acres of beans, a number that fluctuates from year-to-year based on price forecasts and weather. With the corn price projected to be a little better this year, like Matthews many farmers had hoped to grow more corn but those plans are now derailed.

In 2016 the corn acreage in Jefferson County produced an average of 148 bushels per acre while beans averaged 43 bushels. Only time will tell how those numbers will stack up this year.

Mason's job is to provide support and insight to those in need, but his phone has been relatively quiet this spring.

"They haven't got the time to call," Mason said. "They're too frustrated."

As some Indiana farmers push to finish planting corn even though that may prove risky, others are trying to cut their potential for losses with soybeans, which can go in the ground much later than corn. About 42 percent of the state's soybean crop is planted, up from 17 percent from a week earlier. However, the state's five-year average for soybean planting is 89 percent by this time of the season.

Wind whips young corn plants in a field near Hanover. Wet weather has put local farmers well behind on planting.

In neighboring Ohio only one-third of the state's corn crop had been planted as of a week ago. In a typical year, farmers in Ohio would have nearly all of their corn fields planted. Soybean planting is also behind because of the wet weather.

The Ohio Farm Bureau Federation said this is the worst planting season since it started tracking planting progress in the 1970s.

It's been especially bad in northwest Ohio, which is home to some of the most productive agriculture counties in the state.

"There are going to be a bunch of fields filled with weeds," Ty Higgins, a farm bureau spokesman, said recently. "It's going to change the entire landscape of the countryside of northwest Ohio."

Cooler temperatures have made it harder for fields to dry out.

"There have been years we've had wet spells, but this has lingered on," said 63-year-old Mark Bushman, who has a farm near Pemberville. "This is the worst I've experienced."

Kris Swartz, another northwest Ohio farmer, said many farmers won't be able afford another year like this one.

"I've been farming 36 years and this is the first year I may not have an acre of corn," Swartz said.

Joe Logan, who leads the Ohio Farmers Union, said many farmers have decided not to plant corn and will now have to see if they can even get soybeans into the fields. "They're exchanging seed as we speak," Logan said.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has lowered its estimate for this year's corn crop to the lowest in four years, citing the wet weather for reducing acres planted and expected per-acre yield throughout the country.

The nation's expected production was cut in a monthly report released Tuesday by 1.4 billion bushels to 13.7 billion bushels, the lowest since 2015.

While weather problems also have slowed soybean planting, the USDA didn't change estimates since farmers have several more weeks to plant.

The USDA will release its next report June 28 to provide updated farmer surveys more accurately reflecting the number of acres farmers planted.

The USDA report also says disputes with China and other nations have reduced corn exports for the current-year crop by 100 million bushels and soybean exports by 75 million bushels.

Madison offers at its main campus.

"The drive to Versailles is a big barrier for a lot of our kids. If you go to the Career Center you are committing to go there and that knocks out a lot of the opportunities that we are able to provide here," Studebaker said. "We're seeing more and more kids opt to not go so they can take advantage of those opportunities."

Madison's own vocational programs — like Cub Manufacturing and Cub Engineering and partnerships with Ivy Tech and local industries — already serve more students and have been earmarked for expansion. He said they now provide better options for Madison students because they can be better refined to serve local needs and prepare students for local job opportunities.

"Here in Madison we have a lot of outstanding industries who are doing work with some cutting-edge technology. They use a lot of computer-based equipment now and kids need to be able to know how to work with that material," Studebaker said.

He said a new facility at Madison will be outfitted with that technology so students can train on the actual equipment they would use if they worked for local industries, providing a "real world" experience and allowing them to graduate with skills and certifications that make them highly desirable candidates for local jobs.

Studebaker said several years ago Madison was not a member of the SCC and instead provided that training locally and while the "financial realities" at that time "drove that decision" to join the SCC, the financial realities now make it time to withdraw.

"If it was just because it's expensive we would find a way to make that happen if we were feeling we were getting the exact certifications that we needed," he said. "You look at what we're doing now with Ivy Tech and what we're able to do with Cub Manufacturing and Cub Engineering and we think we've got better options."

The next move will be for Studebaker to deliver a letter of withdrawal to the Career Center before its board meeting next week. That will give the Career Center more than a year to adapt to the loss of Madison students and funding while also giving Madison time to consider what programs need to be expanded or added locally.

One program that is being added is Cub Diesel, which will prepare students to be diesel mechanics. Another program Studebaker thinks has great potential for growth is the culinary program.

"Interest in our culinary program has exploded this year. The work those kids are doing and that instructor is doing is phenomenal so we'd like to expand on that and we're looking at some other programs but we're not sure what else we would want to add," Studebaker said.

The Southeastern Career Center opened in 1966 as the state's first vocational education center and has since then strived to provide students with a learning experience that combines technical skills with academic knowledge while also promoting work ethics, citizenship and self-esteem to prepare students for careers in business and industry.

Current member schools also include Batesville, East Central, Jac-Cen-Del, Jennings County, Lawrenceburg, Milan, Rising Sun, South Dearborn, South Ripley, Southwestern and Switzerland County.

In other business, the board:

• Approved final action, as required by the state, to officially close E.O. Muncie Elementary School and re-open Anderson Elementary as the Anderson Elementary School Tigers and transfer E.O. Muncie's entity number for state purposes.

In related action, the board agreed to immediately relocate the corporation's special education offices, technology offices and Madison Alternative Program (MAP) and its approximately 60 students to the E.O. Muncie building.

Studebaker said the move will provide office space for special education staff and create a classroom that can be developed as a training area for professional development. The technology move involves a relocation of personnel but not the corporation's computer servers. The relocation of the existing alternative program from the high school to E. O. Muncie is a first step in a project to "reposition" that program while maintaining MAP as part of the high school at this time.

Studebaker later said that the space vacated by those programs could be used to help expand vocational education.

• Approved a contract to help the corporation become more energy efficient including an $85,975 emergency contract with Johnson-Melloh Solutions to inspect and repair the entire HVAC system at Lydia Middleton Elementary.

Studebaker said the school's heating-cooling energy efficiency is ranked in the bottom 6 percent nationally while still not always making for a comfortable environment for learning and requested the emergency authorization to address the problem before next school year.

The superintendent said the agreement could convert into a "guaranteed energy saving contract" at a later date.

In addition, the board authorized Studebaker to seek a service provider to identify and help implement energy savings projects throughout the corporation.

APBA Gold Cup to be contested on a 2-mile course

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

The first APBA Golf Cup contested on Madison's "Wild Bill" Cantrell race course since 1980 will be run on a two-mile course, Madison Regatta President Matt True confirmed on Wednesday after the organization's weekly general membership meeting.

The Regatta has used the smaller two-mile course for the past several years. That means that the course has not taken it under the Madison-Milton Bridge, but instead turns just before it reaches that point.

True and the rest of the Regatta's Board of Directors have wrestled with the decision on whether to expand the course back to its traditional 2.5-mile length — and thus extend the course underneath the bridge — but have come to the conclusion that keeping the 2-mile distance was simply easier for the organization.

"I've heard a lot of rumors that the reason we don't go under the bridge is that we don't control that side of the shoreline and thus we don't get any money for it," True said. "And while that's true, that's not the reason. Because of the GP course, this allows us to set up just three turns and we just think that is easier and saves more time than trying to set up four."

The automotive-powered Grand Prix World class runs on a smaller 1.5-mile course and uses the existing two-mile course buoys for the bridge turn while having its own set of buoys in the first turn. A 2.5-mile H1 Unlimited course would require the GPW course to either have two separate turns, or would push the start/finish line far upstream or downstream in order to keep one turn concurrent with the H1 course.

"It takes a lot of time to set up those buoys every morning and having an extra turn is just more time that we don't think anybody wants," True said. "We may look at going back to 2.5 next year or something different, but for this year, we're sticking with the existing course."

As for which H1 Unlimited boats will run on the course, True was in the dark.

"We asked for at least six boats and the contract that H1 sent us says eight," True said. "I guess a lot will depend upon if any boats get beat up in the season opener in Alabama (the weekend before)."

In other business:

• Deadline to enter the annual Miss Madison Regatta Scholarship Pageant will be on Sunday and will not be extended. The winner will receive a $1,000 scholarship, first runner-up gets $500 and the winner of the new essay contest will receive $250. The event will be held Monday, July 1 at North Madison Christian Church.

Deadlines for the Regatta's other four pageants, the Little Miss, Miss Princess, Miss Preteen and Miss Teen, are June 21. Those pageants will held on Saturday, June 29.

Applications are available at any German-American Bank location, on the Madison Regatta website, the Madison Regatta Pageants Facebook page or at the Regatta office on Vaughn Drive.

The winner of the Miss Madison Regatta pageant will get a chance to compete in the Indiana State Festivals Pageant.

• The Madison Regatta Cornhole Tournament will be held Saturday, July 6 at Fireman's Park during race weekend.

Blind draw registration begins at noon with the entry fee $5 per person. The tournament starts at 1 p.m. with first prize receiving $300, second prize $200 and third prize $100.

For more information, contact the Regatta office at (812) 274-0400 or Bob Vonch at (812) 599-5853.

• The Regatta is seeking volunteers to help run the Regatta office, which is currently open Monday through Friday but officials are hoping to extend those hours to the weekend.

President Matt True said that the Regatta is also making a general call for volunteers to help out with all facets of the festival. If interested, contact the Regatta at its office on Vaughn Drive or at (812) 274-0400.

• The Regatta's next weekly general membership meeting will be at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, June 19 at The Boneyard Grill.

LeRoy Wilson new head football coach at Madison

Courier Staff Writer
sports@madisoncourier.com

LeRoy Wilson has stood opposite of Madison football on the gridiron on a couple of occasions as an assistant coach and is familiar with how to prepare for the Cubs. As of Wednesday night, his job is to now get the red and white ready for victory.

Wilson was approved by the Madison school board on Wednesday as the new head varsity football coach of the Cubs. He replaces Patric Morrison, who stepped down after six seasons with the team to assume duties as assistant athletic director at Madison High School.

Wilson will also reside in the classroom once the school year begins and will serve as a math teacher at the high school.

"This is very exciting," Wilson said. "This has been a long wait so I got the call about a week and a half ago so I've been waiting for this day. I'm just ready to get going, meet the players and get this summer rolling. We've got eight weeks before the season starts."

Wilson, who topped 16 other applicants for the position, brings with him 15 years of coaching experience as an assistant coach and coordinator. Most recently, he spent time with Hoosier Hills Conference foe Seymour serving in a variety of roles including offensive and defensive coordinator. He has also served as offensive coordinator, quarterbacks coach and receivers coach at Providence.

Wilson's early years saw him as a quarterbacks coach and scout at Charlestown — where he gameplanned against Madison — and Clarksville respectively. He was an offensive coordinator and assistant head coach at Clarksville Middle School.

The experience of coaching against two separate Madison teams, along with facing the rest of the teams in the Hoosier Hills Conference, allows Wilson a leg up in terms of what to expect of his own team and the majority of the Cubs' schedule.

LeRoy Wilson

"I've coached against Madison three times in the last eight years and was a coordinator against the rest of the HHC teams," Wilson said. "I'm very knowledgeable of what these teams like to do. I know some of the conference teams have new coaches but the personnel and players are still there so I'm very familiar, especially with this Madison team."

The Cubs finished just 1-9 a season ago but Wilson noted he was drawn in by a young roster that has showed flashes of its potential last year. At the same time, he notes that he plans to inject some of his coaching style into his Madison team in hopes that competing for victory will be a weekly habit.

"This team (Madison) has a very talented young class," Wilson said. "I've always been a smash-mouth coach; I like to run the football and I'm an offensive-minded guy. But I've also learned from other coaches the more creative side of offense. Defensively we are going to be aggressive. I've learned to attack an offense and play fast. I want to bring a more aggressive mentality to this team."

Also enticing Wilson to his new job is the fact that he has lived in Madison for the past four years. His wife, Alana, is originally from Madison, and the couple have a son, Leo.

"I have family here too," Wilson said. "My sister-in-law goes to the high school and Madison has always been a place that has really stuck with me. This is a great community to be a part of and I'm excited to further involve myself with it. That goes for the football program too. This group has so much potential and I'm excited to add a competitive nature to this program."

Players and parents had a chance to meet with coach Wilson on Thursday in the high school cafeteria for an informational meeting. Football practice will start up on Monday evening with team camps scheduled for July.

Raptors survive late rally to win 1st NBA championship

By JANIE McCAULEY
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. — Kawhi Leonard and the Toronto Raptors captured Canada's first NBA championship with their most remarkable road win yet in the franchise's NBA Finals debut, outlasting the battered and depleted two-time defending champion Golden State Warriors 114-110 on Thursday night in a Game 6 for the ages that spoiled a sensational send-off at Oracle Arena.

Stephen Curry missed a contested 3-pointer in the waning moments before Golden State called a timeout it didn't have, giving Leonard a technical free throw with 0.9 seconds left to seal it. Leonard, the NBA Finals MVP, then got behind Andre Iguodala for a layup as the buzzer sounded, but it went to review and the basket was called off before Leonard's two free throws. That only delayed the celebration for a moment.

When it actually ended, Leonard raised both arms high in triumph and Serge Ibaka pulled his head up through the hoop by the Golden State bench as the crowd chanted "Warriors!"

Curry walked away slowly, hands on his head on a night Splash Brother Klay Thompson suffered a left knee injury and departed with 30 points.

Fred VanVleet rescued the Raptors down the stretch with his dazzling shooting from deep to score 22 points with five 3s off the bench, while Leonard wound up with 22 points. Kyle Lowry scored the game's first eight points and finished with 26 in all to go with 10 assists and seven rebounds.

The Raptors pulled off a third straight win on Golden State's home floor that said goodbye to NBA basketball after 47 seasons. And the Raptors did it with the very kind of depth that helped define Golden State's transformation into a dynasty the past five seasons.

This time, the Warriors were wounded.

Golden State already was down two-time reigning NBA Finals MVP Kevin Durant, who had surgery Wednesday for a ruptured right Achilles tendon. Then, the Warriors lost Thompson — and they couldn't overcome just one more heartbreaking injury.

This thrilling back-and-forth game featured 18 lead changes, nine ties and neither team going ahead by more than nine points.

Curry scored 21 points but shot just 6 for 17 and went 3 of 11 on 3s. Iguodala added 22 for his biggest game this postseason as the Warriors did everything until the very last moment to leave a lasting legacy at Oracle.

US catches heat for goal celebrations

By ANNE M. PETERSON
AP Sports Writer

REIMS, France — The goals were one thing, the celebrations another.

The U.S. women's national team faced criticism following its record-breaking 13-0 rout of Thailand on Tuesday night. The win set a World Cup record for goals and margin of victory. Alex Morgan alone had five goals, matching the most in one game in tournament history.

But there were questions about whether the Americans should have celebrated goals once the game was well in hand. Were the three-time World Cup champions being unsportsmanlike, or merely sending a message to the rest of the field?

Alex Morgan was asked afterward about the display of hugs, high-fives, and posturing for the many American fans at Stade Auguste-Delaune.

"I think in the moment, every time we score a goal in a World Cup — you've dreamt of it. I dreamt of it since I was a little girl," she said. "You know, winning a World Cup and being back there for the third time, we want that fourth star. So tonight we knew that any goal could matter in this group-stage game. And when it comes to celebrations, I think this was a really good team performance and I think it was important for us to celebrate together."

Those celebrations drew ire on social media, some of it directed at veteran Megan Rapinoe for twirling and turf-sliding after her goal — which made it 9-0. A World Cup-record seven U.S. players scored in the game.

Morgan was rebuked for holding up four fingers after her fourth goal, which made it 10-0.

"A lot of this is about building momentum and so as a coach I don't find it my job to rein my players in," coach Jill Ellis said. "This is what they've dreamt about. This is for them. This is a world championship"

Rapinoe, interviewed on FOX Sports on Wednesday, also addressed the criticism.

"If anyone wants to come at our team for not doing the right thing, not playing the right way, not being a good ambassador, they can come at us. It was an explosion of joy," she said. "If our crime is joy, then we will take that."

Rapinoe pointed to the team's young players who scored their first World Cup goals and said they had every right to celebrate, including Samantha Mewis, Rose Lavelle, Mallory Pugh and Lindsey Horan.

In a postgame show of sportsmanship, the U.S. team also consoled some of the emotional Thai players. Morgan offered encouragement to forward Miranda Nild, who like Morgan played college soccer at Cal.

Thailand's players were disappointed, but they have also been on the other end of blowouts. Thailand won a friendly over Indonesia 13-0 last year, and beat Cambodia 11-0 in the group stage of the AFF Women's Championship.

"In football games, everybody is following the rules, and everyone is trying their best," Thailand coach Nuengrutai Srathongvian said. "We have to accept that, this team is very good. We don't have any excuse, except they are better."

Celebrating and piling on the goals are two different issues.

At the World Cup, goal differential becomes important in deciding tie-breakers for the knockout stage. The U.S. team is in a group with nemesis Sweden, as well as Thailand and Chile.

It was understood that the top-ranked Americans would likely trounce Thailand, ranked 34th in the world, and possibly No. 39 Chile, which is making its World Cup debut. The game with Chile is set for Sunday in Paris.

The United States faces Sweden in the final game of the group stage next week. It is their first meeting since the Swedes ousted the Americans from the 2016 Olympics in the quarterfinals — the team's earliest exit ever. Sweden bunkered on defense and afterward then-U.S. goalkeeper Hope Solo called the team cowards.

Currently ranked No. 9, Sweden defeated Chile 2-0 in Rennes on Tuesday night and will play Thailand in Nice on Sunday.

The US did have its defenders, including a familiar one.

"For all that have issue with many goals: for some players this is their first World Cup goal, and they should be excited," former U.S. teammate Abby Wambach tweeted . "Imagine it being you out there. This is your dream of playing and then scoring in a World Cup. Celebrate. Would you tell a men's team to not score or celebrate?"

Louisville shows 'toughness' to reach World Series

By GARY B. GRAVES
AP Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Louisville showcased its "toughness" to qualify for its latest College World Series appearance.

The Cardinals had to overcome three elimination games in a 27-hour stretch early in the NCAA Tournament to keep its CWS hopes alive. Now Louisville (49-16) is heading to its fourth CWS in seven years riding a five-game winning streak, which includes last weekend's super regional domination of East Carolina.

The Cardinals clinched its CWS berth with a 12-0 victory behind an impressive performance by right-hander Bobby Miller, who came within three outs of posting the program's first no-hitter since March 1983. They also had to play the last four contests without closer Michael McAvene, who was suspended for four games following an ejection.

"We definitely showed our toughness," said 13-year Louisville coach Dan McDonnell, who has guided all five CWS berths since 2007. "It's not supposed to be easy. ... You've got to be able to overcome injuries, suspensions, setbacks, defeat.

"Fortunately in baseball you are allowed to lose a couple times throughout the postseason. So, that just gave us a chance to address those things."

Louisville led the Atlantic Coast Conference in multiple categories including batting (.298), runs (441) and earned-run average (3.65). But the top-seeded Cardinals were ousted early in the conference tournament, and followed that disappointing performance up with a 4-2 home loss to Illinois State in the NCAA regional that had Louisville on the brink of elimination.

"It was a wake-up call," said Louisville right-hander Reid Detmers, the ACC's Pitcher of the Year.

The Cardinals responded with a 9-7 win over Indiana that ended up providing a rallying point for the team when McAvene was quickly tossed in the ninth inning after uttering "That's horrible!" following a called ball by home plate umpire Ken Langford. The junior right-hander became something of a sympathetic figure on social media when the clip went viral. Louisville hung his No. 41 jersey in the dugout while beating Illinois State twice, advancing with a 4-3 victory on Alex Binelas' walk-off single.

"Losing McAvene wasn't the best thing for us, but we put that behind us to kind of play for him," said Binelas, a freshman third baseman hitting .307 with a team-best 14 home runs and 59 RBI. "That's what great baseball teams do; they play for each other and not themselves."

Louisville didn't need its bullpen much as all phases clicked against ECU. If outscoring the Pirates 26-1 with 32 hits over two games wasn't impressive enough, Detmers (12-4), Miller (7-1) and relievers Garrett Schmeltz and Michael Kirian combined to hold them to eight hits.

Louisville's resurgence has sparked comparisons to its prospect-rich 2017 CWS team led by national player of the year Brendan McKay, the No. 4 overall pick in the Major League draft by Tampa Bay. McDonnell won't go that far but echoed the team-wide view that depth has helped Louisville weather injuries to several regulars — and McAvene's absence.

"Coach Mac has said it all year," said McAvene (seven saves), who is eligible to return. "It doesn't matter if we're running 1 through 9 in the lineup or 10, 11, 12. Whoever we throw out there, they're going to be ready to go. Same thing with the bullpen.

"In my absence we've got guys like Michael Kirian, Bryan Hoeing, Shay Smiddy and Adam Elliott. All of them could be doing the same job I'm doing and they're going to do it at the highest level."

Louisville's next step is putting everything together in Omaha to move past a 2-8 CWS record toward its first national championship. The Cardinals will open against a familiar foe on Sunday in No. 2 seed Vanderbilt, which won the regular-season meeting 6-2 on May 7 in Louisville and got a no-hitter by Kumar Rocker in last week's super regional against Duke.

While Omaha is familiar for Louisville's veterans, others will be making their first visit. Either way, the Cardinals appreciate the trip because of how close they came to staying home.

Three times, in fact.

"We could have crumbled and said 'this is it,' but we didn't," Binelas said. "We stayed tough and ended up making a nice little run. Hopefully we can make a nice little run to the national championship."

— Coach Brierly's FUN-damental Youth Girls Basketball Camp will be held June 24-28 at Southwestern High School.

The camp, which will be organized and run by Southwestern head girls basketball coach Devin Brierly with help from the current Southwestern staff and players, is open to all youth in the Kentuckiana area, not just Southwestern students. Emphasis will be placed upon developing and improving individual skills, essential basketball fundamentals, building positive relationships, and having fun.

The camp is open to girls in incoming grades first through eighth and will run from 9 a.m. to noon each day. The cost is $30 with an increase to $40 if not paid on the first day of camp.

To register online, visit the Southwestern Girls Basketball Facebook page. Registration the first day of camp is also available from 8:15-8:45 a.m.

— Jefferson County Soccer Association will hold open registration for the Fall 2019 soccer season at the Rucker Sports Complex from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, June 29.

Signups for the MASH camp will also be available on these dates. The camp runs Monday, July 22 through Friday, July 26.

Call Brian Sachleben of JCSA at (502) 310-8484 for more information.

PUBLISHED NOTICE TO LESLIE ANDERSON

In the Matter of the Adoption of Liam Hendry & Mia Anderson, Arlie & Lisa McIntosh, Petitioners

Notice is hereby given to Leslie Anderson, whose whereabouts are unknown, that on the 11th day of April, 2019, Arlie & Lisa McIntosh filed in the Scott Superior Court of Scottsburg, Indiana, a Petition for Adoption, Cause No. 72D01-1904-AD-00012 and 72D01-1904-AD-00013. A hearing on said matter is scheduled for the 2nd day of August, 2019, at 9:00 a.m. in the Scott Superior Court located in Scottsburg, Indiana.
Should Leslie Anderson seek to contest this matter, she must file a motion to contest the adoption in accordance with IC 31-19-10-1 in the above named court not later than thirty (30) days after the date of service of this notice.
If Leslie Anderson does not file a motion to contest the adoption within thirty (30) days after service of this notice the above named court will hear and determine the petition for adoption. The consent to adoption of Liam Hendry and Mia Anderson will be irrevocably implied and Leslie Anderson will lose the right to contest either the adoption or the validity of Leslie Anderson's implied consent to the adoption.
No oral statement made to Leslie Anderson relieves Leslie Anderson of Leslie Anderson's obligations under this notice.
This notice complies with IC 31-19-4.5-3 but does not exhaustively set forth a person's legal obligations under the Indiana adoption statutes. A person being served with this notice should consult the Indiana adoption statutes.

River Valley Resources honors high school equivalency

Graduates awarded diplomas at ceremony

By ELISABETH MOORE
Courier staff writer

River Valley Resources celebrated students who earned a high school equivalency diploma in Jefferson County last week at Ivy Tech Community College Madison Campus.

Those who graduated include Anthony Barker, Jason Bayne, Jackson Bibb, Taylor Brashears, Kyle Brinson, Duncan Broyles, Irish Broyles, Loren Cranfill, Bailey Hatton, Alec Meisberger, Andy Muldoon, Terri Perry, Rosa Portillo and Donald Scudder.

River Valley Resources' Adult Education is a federally funded state program that provides math, reading and writing instruction free of charge to help adults acquire the skills needed to earn a high school equivalency diploma, go to college or enter an entry-level occupational certification program. River Valley Resources offers free Adult Basic Education programs in Clark, Dearborn, Floyd, Franklin, Harrison, Jefferson, Ohio, Ripley, Scott, Switzerland and Washington counties.

Konnie McCollum, River Valley Resources director of Adult Education in Region 9 and Region 10, said there is still a large need for adult education programs because of school dropout rates. With the help of a variety of community partners throughout Jefferson County, River Valley Resources helps about 500 people each year in the area.

For more information about the River Valley Resources Adult Education program, go to https://bit.ly/2ZpsFSm

JCTC scholarship for workforce

VF Outlet Inc. donated $500 to the general scholarship fund at the Jefferson Community and Technical College Carrollton Campus to help promote worthy work in the community. Heather Yocum, JCTC Carrollton Campus Coordinator, accepted the check and a certificate recognizing JCTC Carrollton Campus for its leadership in developing tomorrow's workforce from Millie Lawrence, store manager for the VF Outlet in Carrollton.

BRIDGE

WHICH SUIT SHOULD YOU PLAY FIRST?

Who said, "Being first lady is the hardest unpaid job in the world."?

In many deals, today's being one of them, the declarer must decide what suit to attack first.

South is in three no-trump. West leads his fourth-highest diamond. Declarer calls for dummy's king and is relieved when East plays the jack, not the ace. How should South continue?

North used Stayman to try to find a 4-4 heart fit. But when one was not uncovered, the defenders learned more about declarer's hand. If this worries you, play that responder's immediate jump to three of a major shows four cards in the other major and game-going values. Here, North would have responded three spades.

South starts with eight top tricks: three spades, three hearts, one diamond and one club. The extra winner might come from hearts or clubs; and there is a commonly held view that declarer should first attack the suit in which he has the greatest number of cards. Also, a priori, the chance of running the clubs is 50-50, but getting a fourth heart winner is only 35.53 percent.

However, when South ran dummy's club jack at trick two, West took the trick and cashed his diamonds to defeat the contract.

With two chances, play first on the suit in which you do not risk losing the lead. So, declarer should have tried the hearts first; when they did break 3-3, he could have claimed. But if hearts had proved to be 4-2, South would still have had the club finesse available.

The comment about the first lady was made by Pat Nixon.

Hurtful assumptions disrupting friendship

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I have known one of my friends, "Pam," for more than 50 years, and at times she has been a very good friend. She and her husband introduced me to my now-ex-husband and were both in my wedding party.

Last year, I had a disagreement with a mutual friend, "Sharon." Quite frankly, I thought Sharon was in the wrong, but I decided her friendship was more important than who was right and who was wrong. I apologized to Sharon and took the blame.

When we all had our 50th high school reunion recently, Pam hung out with Sharon and only briefly said hello to me, though her husband came over to talk to me.

More recently, she sent me an email saying that my ex-husband had come to visit her husband and her. She said that he looked badly, and he told her that my children have not been there for him, which is not the truth. She told me I should speak with my adult children and tell them to visit him more.

I feel that in both instances — with Sharon and my ex-husband — Pam judged me without hearing my side of the story. I would never dream of telling her that her two kids were not assisting her or her husband without knowing more. How should I handle this? — Friends Like These

Dear Friends Like These: It is inevitable that people will make assumptions and judgments about one another's personal business. It's petty, foolish — and utterly human. Trust yourself and your decisions and put no stock in others' uninformed opinions of your life. You can't manage everyone's perception of you, and you'll go crazy trying.

That said, you can and should tell a friend when she's been hurtful. Share with Pam what you shared with me: You would never presume to tell her how she should manage her personal affairs, and you hope she will put herself in your shoes and see how her comments could come across as judgmental.

Dear Annie: I've been told that young people should use a credit card more often so that they can build a good credit history. I'm 24. I'd like to get a credit card that I can use for small recurring expenses. But I don't really know anything about banking, let alone which of the dozens of options is right for me. I'd like something with travel benefits, such as airline miles. And of course, there are technical things like interest rates to take into account. Can you provide some clarity on credit cards for beginners? I've heard horror stories about credit misuse. But more importantly, there are just so many similar options! No one taught me how to do this. — Credit Confused

Dear Credit Confused: You don't sound so confused, only (wisely) trepidatious. You've got the right idea about using a credit card for small recurring expenses, such as utility bills. If you fly a lot, choosing one of the airline cards could be a good option, as you'll often automatically get perks such as free checked bags. This is better than usage-dependent perks (e.g., spending $2,000 in the first three months of opening an account), which can end up encouraging you to spend more than you can afford. I'd also recommend looking at not just the introductory interest rate (which is often 0 percent) but the rate after the introductory period is over. However, no advice I could offer can take the place of advice from a good financial adviser. Financial advisers aren't just for the wealthy. Accredited Financial Counselors work with low- and middle-income clients. You can visit their website (https://www.afcpe.org) to learn more and find an accredited counselor.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! Annie Lane's debut book – featuring favorite columns on love, friendship, family and etiquette – is available as a paperback and e-book. Visit http://www.creatorspublishing.com for more information.
